

Everett Porter Track 6 (son of Jasper, son of Alex, son of Andrew J. Porter) 5-18-1980

Everett:...About that wide, crooked handle in it. They would get up on a log and they would just use that along there and they would just about as smooth as you could plane one.

Scott: Ya

Everett: Well that is the way they made their seats. They'd take a log and split him right in the middle, then they would hew that there inside off of there. Get him down slick and pretty, then they would bore a hole up in there...

Scott: Ya, put the legs...

Everett: Put the legs in it. That is the way they made their milk stools and all. Take a piece of log and make a milk stool out of it. Make them stools and set on it way back there, they tell me. I didn't go to school where they had them, because they had seats whenever I went to school. I've heard old fellers tell about going where they had that kind of seat. Old Uncle Frank Abbot was telling me about going, he taught school. He was telling about the kind of seats they had and all. The school house set right up there in front of Floyd Burchett's there. Right along in there where Floyd's got his building in there you know. Big tin building, right along in there. Me and him went up there one day. He was showing me right there was where he taught school. Telling what a time they had.

Grace: It's ready.

Everett: Turn this thing off.
